		most effective search methodologies as applicable to different categories of missing person (illness, motivation, physical condition, learning difficulties, etc.) and environments (highland, lowland, urban, complex structure, rail user, etc.). To remain impartial, there is no corporate sponsorship of this research. The research is topic based and conducted in small groups, mainly consisting of statistical analysis of search find outcomes and the â?~effortâ?T/resource data against the missing person scenarios, using Koester's methodologies.

		I lecture widely both within the UK and outside it. Much of this is for the Royal College of Anaesthetists and the Association of Anaesthetists of Great Britain and Ireland. My travel costs to deliver such lectures are routinely reimbursed (most organisations offer first class travel: I routinely travel and of course claim reimbursement of standard class travel). Infrequently attendance at such meetings will also involve overnight accommodation. The organisations usually waive the conference and hotel costs too: I may or may not manage to stay for the conference. A dinner may be included: I have never asked the value of this
