First ever RUH Governors elected

An exciting new era has begun at the Royal United Hospital, with the election of the Trust's first ever NHS Foundation Trust Governors.

Eleven Public Governors and five Staff Governors have been chosen to represent the views of members, and they will sit on the new Council of Governors alongside five Stakeholder Governors. Nearly 3,000 people voted, and the overall election turn-out was 32%.

Governors act as representatives for their respective areas and provide a link with the wider community. Their role includes holding the Trust's Board of Directors to account for our performance, delivering strategic plans, and meeting our core purpose and values.

Chairman Brian Stables says: "We're delighted with the response we had to our first ever elections, both in terms of the number of people who put themselves forward and the number who grasped the opportunity to have their say and cast their vote for those they want to represent their views.

"The establishment of our first ever Council of Governors heralds the start of a new era in the history of the RUH.

"I am looking forward to working with our new Governors, who have the privilege of representing our growing membership and will play a pivotal role in the future of our organisation.

"These are genuinely exciting times for us and we now feel we're really on the way to becoming an NHS Foundation Trust."

The Governors will now start their induction process and will be operating in shadow form until we are authorised as an NHS Foundation Trust, which is likely to be in Spring 2013. The 21 members of the Council of Governors will meet in full for the first time early next month.
